Win95 Boza Virus Disinfectants

IBM, McAfee Associates, Inc., and Symantec Corp. have written updates to their virus scanners to detect the new Boza virus that affects Windows 95.

The Boza virus can infect up to three 32-bit Windows applications in a directory. The virus displays a message from its authors, and does not appear to inflict serious damage.

The scanner updates are available on the WWW at http addresses: www.ibm.com, www.mcafee.com, and www.symantec.com.

NY Times Website

The New York Times has created an Internet website that contains an electronic version of its daily and Sunday papers at <http://www.nytimes.com>.

There is no registration fee for U.S. readers. The site also includes the popular crossword puzzles and a software program, Lyriq, to view each day's puzzle, complete and score it on-screen, or print it for traditional pen and paper completion.

Corel Buys PerfectOffice

PerfectOffice, which includes WordPerfect, was sold by Novell, Inc. to Corel Corp. for $180 million.

Canadian software developer, Corel, has the opportunity to compete directly with Microsoft Corp., and its Office suite. Novell's focus will be network applications, including GroupWise.

Adobe PageMaker 6.0

Adobe Systems, Inc. has released PageMaker 6.0 for Windows and Macintosh. More than just an upgrade to version 5.0, the new product is a giant leap forward for document production.

Using Kodak's Precision Color Mgt System (CMS), every color publication is assured excellent color fidelity.

Object control is enhanced by allowing the user to group, lock, and automatically align objects. Objects may even be tagged as nonprinting.

Text, graphics, and images can be masked using polygons, ovals, and rectangles.

Multiple master pages allow the user to specify and apply different page designs within a single publication.

Just The Fax is published using PageMaker 6.0 for Windows and the Windows 95 operating system.
